

Welcome Back Volunteers!

What an amazing journey our Garden has brought us on! We're not done yet though, the 2010 harvest is still coming in as we begin our fall and winter preparations for the garden.

If you were planning on making one last visit to our Community Garden, this week's the week to do it!

Nature gives to every time and season some beauties of its own; and from morning to night, as from the cradle to the grave, it is but a succession of changes so gentle and easy that we can scarcely mark their progress.

~ Charles Dickens

We are in the middle of our last team session this week. The team will be working on watering and harvesting the plants that are still producing.

There will be some end of season fun as we help our garden make her transition into fall and winter. We'll be taking down signs and getting everything put away for the season soon.

Until then, we will be pulling up or cutting back vegetable plants that are done giving this season. The plants and weeds can be laid out to compost into our garden for next year! (Where's that "easy" button?)

There is something so magical about nature's ability to renew itself, don't ya think?

All phenomena in the universe exist within the context of mutually supportive relationships. Nothing exists without meaning and nothing is without significance. ~ Daisaku Ikeda

Our FISH and PADS donations haven't gone unnoticed folks. Global Hope has received great feedback from both the programs including, "The produce always goes" and "We would take more if you had more!" In all, there has been over 100 bags of produce delivered!

Part of this Garden's mission was to provide nutritious organic vegetables to those in need. We came together as a community and we did it! Each and every one of you should be proud of the part YOU played. Access to quality produce means better nutrition and that makes a difference in people's health and quality of life. Those plants you watered in July or those weeds you pulled in June or maybe your thinking, "I only filled the water barrel that one time", we say...it ALL matters!

We will CELEBRATE at the Volunteer Appreciation BBQ on Oct 3rd

Until next season for the 2011 Global Hope Community Garden Newsletter...

Don't be sad though, there's still plenty of Global Hope events, gatherings, happenings, opportunities and ways to help in the near future! Keep up to date by checking in at the Global Hope web site at www.GlobalHopeNow.org

Where will we meet next Volunteers?
